

MAD CAT ATTACKS HOSPITAL HANDS

Ambulance Drivers and Watchman Badly Bitten
by Animal.

Three employees of Bellevue Hospital were painfully injured last night in a battle with a mad cat at the hospital stables. The injured men are Thomas Coughlin and John Russell, ambulance drivers, and John Hayden, a watchman. At 7 o'clock an ambulance call summoned Coughlin to the stables. As he was about to drive out a large black cat, which had been the general pet of the stable force, alighted upon his shoulders. It sank its teeth into the flesh of Coughlin's neck and viciously worked its claws free.

Coughlin roared with pain and his stable mates ran to him. Hayden seized the cat and was severely scratched. Russell beat the animal with a stick, but the cat still used its claws. Finally Russell seized the cat in a double handed grip and literally tore it from the shoulders of the shrieking driver. After a severe tussle Hayden killed the cat.

Once freed from the animal Coughlin sprang to his post of duty and hurried his ambulance away in answer to the original call. On his return the ambulance physician, Dr. Lindsay, noticed that Coughlin's coat was soaked with blood.

As soon as Coughlin explained the cause of his condition Dr. Lindsay ordered the ambulance stopped and treated the wounds. The man's neck and hands were already badly swollen. An autopsy will be held on the cat to determine whether or not it had the rabies.

FOUGHT MANIAC IN AN AMBULANCE

Surgeon and Madman Had
Battle for Life in Fast
Moving Wagon.

While the horse galloped at top speed Dr. Rogers, of Bellevue Hospital, had a desperate struggle with Maurice Eisenberg, a maniac, in an ambulance yesterday. Over and over the two men rolled, while Eisenberg, with a lunatic's strength, tried to sink his teeth in the physician's throat.

At the hospital it took four men to break Eisenberg's hold; they overpowered him finally and locked him in the psychopathic ward.

Eisenberg, twenty-one years old, and living at No. 124 Osborne avenue, the Bronx, was receiving medical treatment in the Post Graduate Hospital, East Twentieth street, when he became maniacal. He attacked Dr. Calloway, who was treating him, and a nurse named Geranne, and so insane was he that they called assistance and held him until Dr. Rogers arrived to take him to Bellevue.

Dr. Rogers took the precaution to run and handcuff Eisenberg; then he was carried, struggling, to the ambulance. Searchlight had it started when the maniac slipped the handcuffs, tore the saw from his mouth and threw himself on the doctor, who yelled to "Billy" Smith, the driver: "Drive like —"

It seemed to Dr. Rogers that the ambulance traversed miles before it dashed through Bellevue's gate, for he was fighting for his life. Clinching with Eisenberg, the doctor could only hold him, stretch his own head back and thrust away the jaws that were snapping at him. He was almost exhausted when the Bellevue orderlies mastered the lunatic.

Vote Intelligently.
Of course you will. But before you vote you want to know just how much weight your determination for or against a certain party or candidate will carry. Do you know how your Election District went last year? There is as much business as sentiment in voting. Post yourself regarding "past performances" buy The World Almanac and Encyclopedia for 1906.

WANTS $200 A MINUTE FOR A HUC.

BRANDALL, O., Oct. 12.—Mrs. Minnie Mackay, a pretty telegraph operator, asked $200 a minute for the ten minutes Louis Felsner, a Warrensville married man, held her in his arms. In her contention, filed in the Common Pleas Court, she says it was against her protest and against his kisses her continually while holding her.

The New Shop for Children

Those who have shopped for the children and journeyed from basement to garret to gather the little things they were after—those who have been told that they would find the "boys' suits on the eighth floor" and "girls' shoes in the basement," will appreciate the convenience which our children's shop offers. Everything that a boy in short trousers or a girl in short dresses can possibly demand in the way of apparel and personal requisites is to be found on the 2d floor. They will also appreciate the exceptionally modest prices.
